Uric Acid Poisoning

(By Dr. N. C. Cook)

A poison as dangerous as strychnine is manufactured within our own bodies, called uric acid. When it accumulates in the body and the kidneys fail to carry it off, we suffer from dull headache, sleeplessness, muscular pains, humors, or it may cause rheumatism or gout. The uric acid can be seen in the cloudy sediment in the water—what is called the "brick-dust," noted on the sides of the vessel containing it—after a few hours' standing. The water is scant, high-colored, strongly acid, and this should be a danger sign, and if not taken in time by cutting out meat, tea and alcohol, may end in rheumatism or gout.

Take "An-uric," first discovered by Dr. Pierce, of the Surgical Institute in Buffalo, N. Y. Anuric (anti-uric acid) Tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poisons Start to Leave the System Within Twenty-four Hours.

Every druggist in this country is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer that if two bottles of Allenru, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and give away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenru has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and pitiable and where the patient was helpless.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenru, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenru has completely conquered this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed Peoples Drug Stores to guarantee it in every instance.

DRIVER BARES "LEEDS" SPATS

Chauffeur for Stillman and "Chicken" Tells of "Battles" in Automobile.

NEW YORK, March 22.—An intimate glimpse of the life of James A. Stillman and Florence Leeds was given today by Raymond Carlson, one of the numerous chauffeurs. Carlson lives at 354 East Sixty-sixth street.

He said he found out soon after entering the employ of the Leeds, in March, 1919, that Franklin Harol Leeds was James A. Stillman.

MRS. HAD A TEMPER. He said: "I drove for Mr. Leeds from March to the close of the summer season in 1919. The boy was then only six months old. They were living in the Hotel Langdon and in the Eighty-sixth street apartment."

"I got my orders in the morning to meet Mrs. Leeds at the apartment in the forenoon, and I drove her and the child, and Mr. Leeds when he was with them, to the Langdon in the afternoon. "They did not go to the theaters. I used to drive them to the movie theaters mostly. Mr. Leeds, I soon found out, was Mr. Stillman. That was none of my business. He was paying me a satisfactory salary and his private affairs were none of my concern."

"I will say that Mr. Leeds was a fine man. He was always kind and considerate to me. Mrs. Leeds had her temper. It was a good one, too. "He and she had many a battle in the car. She seemed to become annoyed very easily. Her temper was the cause of my leaving the job. She had me drive her down to Far Rockaway a number of times to look at summer places she wanted to buy."

"Twice she asked me whether I would like to spend the summer at Far Rockaway. I had no choice in the matter. She did not buy the place at any rate. That summer we spent at Far Rockaway. "At the end of the season, in about the latter part of September, they decided to return to the city. There was a dance at the hotel and after dinner Mrs. Leeds decided she wanted to join the dancers."

"She told me to get my car in the line as she would be in a hurry when she came out. I told her I had not had my dinner. She told me to get it. I got my car in a good place in the line of autos and then gathered up the keys and locked the car as I went to dinner."

CAR IN THE GARAGE. "When I came out of the restaurant the car was gone. I had the wraps and the camera in my hands. I brought them home to New York. Next morning I went to the garage to make sure the car had not been stolen. It was there."

"Then I was satisfied Mrs. Leeds had become impatient at my absence and had been ready to go, and had either found another chauffeur or Mr. Leeds drove the car to this city. He could have unlocked the car."

"I was so angry at her treatment that I did not go near her for a week. In that time I had the wraps, her and the child's, and the camera here in the house."

"There was a film showing all three in the camera and an envelope full of undeveloped films. I returned them all and was paid my week's salary."

"That ended my relations with the Leeds, and I was glad. "We used to pick up her father, Lawlor, at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, one block from the city hall. I knew his name was Lawlor and that he was Mrs. Leeds' father."

"Several times she had me drive her to her father's home up on Amsterdam avenue, looked at the wooden stairs of the tenement house. I was afraid to climb them."

"I used to drive them to Blossom Heath Inn, the Longview, Nassau Inn, Arrowood Inn, but never out of the city. Mr. Leeds, or Mr. Stillman, as you call him, was all right, and their troubles are nothing to me."

PAYS WARM TRIBUTE TO MRS. STILLMAN

H. Phelps Clawson, Wealthy Friend of Family, Calls Her "Finest of Mothers."

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 22.—In a vigorous defense of Mrs. "Fin" Potter Stillman, H. Phelps Clawson, son of John L. Clawson, millionaire merchant of Buffalo and prominent in society, today branded as "false, ridiculous and absurd" James A. Stillman's attack on the legitimacy of baby Guy.

In his mansion home at 1109 Delaware avenue, young Clawson, Yale man of the class of '17, former lieutenant in the Aviation Corps and now assistant treasurer of the Marine Trust Company, of this city, received a reporter.

A tall, handsome, athletic youth of twenty-eight, broad of shoulder and military in bearing, he deplored having been dragged into the celebrated divorce snarl, but declared that he would do everything in his power to remove the stigma that Stillman has placed on the family name.

DEFENDS MRS. STILLMAN. Clawson not only warmly defended Mrs. Stillman, whom he characterized as "the finest woman I ever knew," but rallied to the defense of Fred Beauvais, the half-breed Indian guide named as co-respondent by the bank. And when the case goes to trial Clawson, for the past eight years an intimate friend of the Stillmans, will take the witness stand and testify for the wife.

He has already turned over to John E. Mack, of Poughkeepsie, guardian ad litem for baby Guy, proof which he believes will show the falsity of the charges reflecting on the legitimacy of the child. He declared to the reporter that he was present in the Stillman home in Pleasantville in the month of January, 1918, and saw the bank's charges.

Another Buffalo man, whose name would not be disclosed, was there, also, and saw Stillman, he said, and is ready and willing to testify to that fact.

Documentary proof that Stillman was living under the same roof during that period with the wife he now accuses is in the hands of Mack. It is in the form of letters that Mr. Clawson wrote to his mother while he was a guest of the Stillmans at Pleasantville, in January, 1918.

TOLD MOTHER OF IT. In the letters to his mother, who died a year ago, Mr. Clawson referred to the presence of Stillman in the house. Therefore, he said with a chuckle, there can be no doubt as to the legitimacy of little Guy. Then he added:

"While I have no desire to be drawn into this affair, I shall certainly go to the front for Mrs. Stillman and leave no stone unturned to clear her good name. I say without the slightest hesitation in the world, a woman who is beyond reproach and incapable of wrongdoing."

"She was a mother to me during all the years I have known her. In fact, I called her my mother and she looked upon me as her adopted son. She was my inspiration and imbued in me the ideals which have made me the man I am today."

While I must admit that my own family did a great deal for me, it was Mrs. Stillman who gave me inspiration. Perhaps I would never have written a poem if it hadn't been for her influence. And I feel that I would never have done all the finer things in life for which I am justly proud if it hadn't been for her."

"Mother—I must call her mother—helped me immensely, just as she has helped many others. She is a

'A Man's Man,' Sings Poet of Fred Beauvais

Added interest has been thrown upon Fred Beauvais, the French-Canadian Indian guide and north country ranger, named as co-respondent in James A. Stillman's suit for divorce, with the discovery that the big, handsome guide is the hero of a poem.

The poem, "To a Man's Man," was written in the Drummond country of the northland, and is in the true "habitant" vernacular, comparable to Si Henry Drummond's best. It appears in a volume called "First Poems," from the pen of H. Phelps Clawson, one of Buffalo's best known writers. Here is the poem:

TO A MAN'S MAN
(Written in the Drummond Country, and with Apologies to the Post Who Knew It So Well.)

Fred Beauvais, of de San Maurice,
Fred Beauvais, of La Tuque;
He am de boy dat catch de moose
Trap de beaver and wing de goosie,
And he nevaire, do it by de fluke— Fred Beauvais.

Oh, who can rise in de mornin'
Most quickly "chauffeur Pascal"?
Who can carry de biggest pack—
Four hundred pounds—right on heels back?
Mighty fine man to have for a pal— Fred Beauvais.

Who can cut de best axe handle
Or make de best moose call?
De Big-nose come from far and near;
It drives 'em crazy when they hear
Dat boy with his roll of birch—
Dat's all— Fred Beauvais.

Who can build de fine log cabin
And cut de balsam bough?
De way he cook de pork and bean
Woman of de loftiest ideals, and those who know her understand full well the absurdity of these outrageous charges James Stillman brings against her.

I honestly believe that Mrs. Stillman couldn't do wrong of any sort, and I speak with authority because I know her and understand her.

"She has ever been a wonderful mother to her children, who fairly worship her. She was not of that kind of idle rich who leave the care of their children to nurse maids, the butlers and other servants. She was a mother to her children in everything that the word implies."

"But it is downright hard to conceive how any right-minded or right-thinking person could for a moment entertain a thought that there was the slightest justification for Stillman's outrageous charges. I have no quarrel with James Stillman, but why does he stoop to such depths? How can he possibly bring suffering to innocent children, who are entitled to the protection of their father? It is beyond me."

"It is very significant that he didn't select one of his society acquaintances in New York to name as co-respondent. Instead, he singles out Fred Beauvais."

Ice Protects Seals.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 22.—Failure of the sealing season is believed to be almost inevitable because the fleet that left here ten days ago has been unable to reach the herds through the impenetrable ice flows. The only exception is one steamer which went to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Yesterday's blizzard also added to the difficulties of the vessels.

Ban Corporal Punishment.

WARSAW, March 22.—Clauses in the new Polish constitution just adopted forbid corporal punishment and do away with coats of arms.

BABY IN DISPUTE GURGLES HAPPILY

Little Guy Stillman Is Merry Youngster Unaware of Legal Battles.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 22.—The sternest court of justice could not but lose its heart to Baby Guy Stillman.

The tiny co-defendant with his mother in James A. Stillman's divorce action left no doubt as to that yesterday when he toddled out on the lawn of Laurel in the Pines to have his picture taken.

Guy approached the formidable line of eager camera men as jubilantly as Huck Finn would have made his way to an unguarded cookie-jar. His merry baby laugh sent a bound of warmth to the hearts of all the sophisticated grown-ups enveloping him.

FULL OF SMILES. With Alexander, his nine-year-old brother as a stay of courage, Guy gave a bounty of smiles right into the eyes of all those cameras. He turned as his own impulse prompted to bestow a whisper-kiss on Alexander's ear, or spread and closed his chubby little hand in greeting to all those men on their knees before him.

Then the cunning little brown eyes, those same eyes that Alexander has looked over his assembled servitors as he held proudly before their gaze his sore finger, hygienically bound up in gauze but none the less a treasured asset to any boy.

"Guy like mans," the sturdy twenty-eight-month-old subject offered grandly.

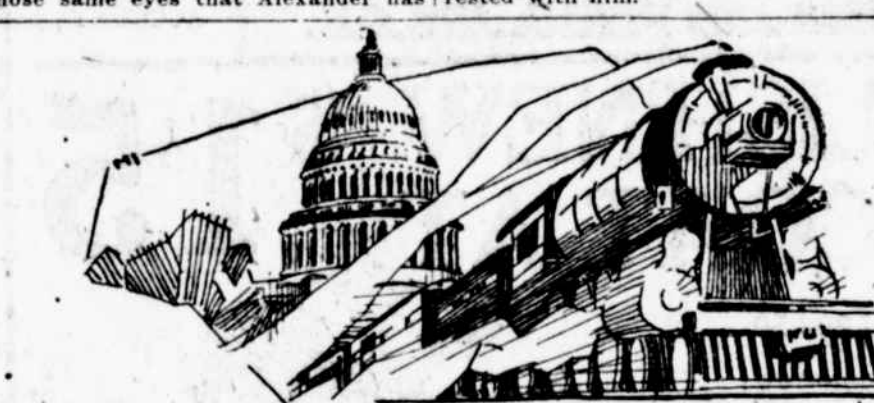

During all this time heads and shoulders, clusters and singly, sprang from the four floors of hotel windows to rival the vaulted flowers in the spring. And, of course, a little baby white stocking began to wriggle about a brown baby shoe to demand the nurse's attention.

LIKES TO PLAY WITH SHIPS. These things did not disturb Guy, but he found them not to his liking. The pictures were made on the broad, beautiful lawn to the rear of the hotel and facing the tennis courts. Alex offered that he liked ships better than posing for pictures, while Guy made it plain that he disapproved of dolls for boys.

Mrs. Stillman, whose heartening smile and graciousness are among the requests to her children, did not accompany them in the scene. She had planned to do so, but did not feel strong enough when the hour came. Though not ill, her physician has visited her these last few days and advised motoring instead, for the morning recreation.

Go on Hunger Strike.

MILAN, March 22.—Enrico Malatesta, the anarchist leader, who was arrested last October in connection with an anarchist plot discovered by the police of Milan, has gone on a hunger strike, in which he has been joined by the other anarchists arrested with him.
